Testimonies from uranium mining communities

Bettie Yazzie and Gilbert Badoni, New Mexico, USA. Bettie Yazzie is a Navajo Indian. Her husband died from lung cancer 1974 after working 10 years in a uranium mining site operated by Union Carbide Corporation. She speaks only Navajo and will be accompanied by Gilbert Badoni, who will act as a translator. He is Navajo himself and son of a uranium miner from Colorado. Meanwhile Gilbert Badonis entire family has cancer.

Dr. Bremley W.B. Lyngdoh, Worldview Impact Foundation, UK/India. Bremley Lyngdoh is a native belonging to the Khasi tribe of Meghalaya, and since 1992 he has been defending the rights of his indigenous people in West Khasi Hills of North East India who happen to live in an area of great biodiversity richness, but also on high-grade uranium reserves. The Central Government of India and State Government of Meghalaya want to cut down 500 hectares of virgin forest to mine high-grade uranium for nuclear programmes, thereby destroying indigenous lands and livelihoods.

Award ceremony

Presentation of Award by the Indigenous Peoples to James Cameron (invited) for his movie "Avatar", which intentionally or unintentionally, raises worldwide awareness about the problems of the "energy stone" uranium and the destruction caused to indigenous peoples communities around the world
